> The website is amazing. It's a great information hub for people who might not be ready to personally engage and, instead, want to find support on their own.

> I have worked at four different college institutions, and as a campus administrator, there is absolutely nothing like ConcernCenter. This is exactly what students need — to access help in a way that makes sense to them. ConcernCenter is onto something that may very well change how colleges/universities address finding support for mental health, and other concerns.

> ConcernCenter has been a great promotional resource for our office! We've been able to consolidate information about resources, and students are really impressed by the option to search for concerns they have. The depth of accessibility options is a great touch to make this resource accessible to all without barriers.
