It's also a legal requirement designed to guarantee equitable access for all.

Allyant provides a set of support hours to help you reach your goals. How an organization uses these hours in the activities is up to the organization and can shift over time.

Reliable, Comprehensive Auditing.

Real People. Real Accessibility Results.

Technology can be helpful, but not always. Sometimes even the best tools miss the nuances that real people experience. At Allyant, we believe the best approach to accessibility auditing is having real people with disabilities lead the detailed review and assessment. After all, who can better define what's best than the very people who benefit from accessibility compliance?

Our Digital Accessibility Auditors lead the detailed review and assessment process using assistive technologies. These assessments include screen readers, refreshable braille displays, alternative mouse and simple switches — all designed to capture the keyboard-only user experience. We then apply these standards established in WCAG 2.0 and 2.1 Level A & AA, as well as additional appropriate global accessibility standards in your specific region or country.
